

Ákos Veisz

He graduated as an economist from the Finance Faculty of the Corvinus University of Budapest in 2006 and he got the Professional Prize of the University.

In 2005 he studied at the Tilburg University in the Netherlands with an Erasmus scholarship, between 2007 and 2010 he attended more professional trainings abroad in topics such as exchange rate policies, financial markets and government debt management.

Between 2006 and 2010 he worked at the Economic Policy Department at the Ministry for Finance as a financial analyst, and after that he was an economic analyst at the Prime Minister's Office and worked with dr György Szapáry, Chief Economic Policy Advisor to the Prime Minister.

From 2011 he was a diplomat responsible for financial and economic policy at the Embassy of Hungary in Washington, DC.

He has been a counsellor at MKB Bank from February 2015, strategic director from August 2015 and Executive Director of the Strategic Executive Directorate from January 2017. His tasks are to manage the Strategic and analysing competency of the MKB Group and the central product- and business development fields of the Bank.

He participates in the work of national and international professional and representative bodies.

Since 2002 he has been a member, Chief Financial Officer and later Chairman of the Heller Farkas College operating in the Corvinus University. Since 2006 he has been senior member of the organization, and he is lecturer of financial courses.